Dear colleagues and friends,

We invite abstracts for the 1st INTERACT Interdisciplinary Symposium on Social Network Analysis, co-organized by the Universidad de los Andes and CESA in Bogotá, Colombia, on June 18 and June 19, 2018. This symposium has two objectives: First, to provide researchers that have an interest in social network analysis with methodological training through series of hands-on workshops. These workshops will range from a general introduction to social network analysis to more advanced (stochastic) methods, such as ERGMs, SIENA, and agent-based models. Second, to encourage exchanges between Colombian, Latin American and international network scholars through presentations and discussions in themed research-paper sessions.

Confirmed keynote speakers include Martin Kilduff (University College London) and Tomás Rodríguez Barraquer (Universidad de los Andes).

Please submit an extended abstract (1200 words or less; may contain tables and pictures) no later than April 1 at the following URL: <https://easychair.org/conferences/?conf=interact2018>. We welcome (and look forward to) submissions from all academic areas that apply social network analysis. Topics may include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Networks in organizations, markets, and supply chain management
- Networks in politics, public policy, and public health
- Computational and mathematical approaches to networks
- Processes of network dynamics
- Multilevel networks

This is a bilingual symposium (English/Spanish). We encourage submissions and presentations in English but submissions and presentations in Spanish are welcome. You will be notified by April 15 whether your work has been accepted for presentation. If desired, submissions can be considered for publication in "Connections".

Please note that participation in the symposium is not contingent upon submission of an abstract or acceptance as presenter.
